Specialist Bryant Jacobs, US Army stationed with the 65th Engineer Battalion out of Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. In 2004, he and his Battalion were deployed to Iraq. Their missions included the following: route clearance, building up the F.O.B. (Forward Operating Base), disposing of any type of munitions they found, taking care of IED's found. On December 3rd, escorting some troops to the air base in Kirkuk, the convoy was hit by an IED. Bryant was thrown from his Humvee. In massive amounts of pain he didn't wake up until three weeks later at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. Bryant's injuries were extensive. He was missing his large intestine, half of his left calf, inner part of right thigh and part of his index finger; he had "drop foot" in both feet, a broken right femur, scars all over, and nerve damage in right leg. After 22 months and over 40 surgeries, he was medically retired from the Army and returned home to Utah in 2006. After many years and more surgeries, on March 18th, 2014 the VA decided to amputate his right leg. There were some complications and he endured yet another surgery after that. He received his first prosthetic leg in June of 2014 and doing better. Bryant has degree in Communications, likes snowboarding and was able to complete the NYC marathon in October on his hand cycle! He is currently training for the Los Angeles marathon in March. Bryant is married with two stepdaughters.
